PRETTY PITCHERS' BATTLE

Field Muddy and Conditions Bad, but Fast Work Is Done.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
NORFOLK, VA., April 3.—In a pretty pitchers' battle between Rose and Walker, started in a drizzling rain and fought out on a muddy field, Yale defeated the University of Virginia this afternoon by the score of 4 to 3. By more opportune batting, added to "just luck."

It was seen from the jump that this was a fight for blood; that the two pitchers were in excellent trim and that the tide of battle would depend on the inopportuneness of misuses and opportune batting. Yet it was a game of remarkably few misuses under the conditions and so early in the season. Those made, however, were costly, and decided the result.

After the second inning the Virginia contingent was happy. They opened the third with a home run, but the game opened by accepting one in the ribbon and walking. Cabanis died in left field on an effort. Hume grounded to third. Cushman was too anxious, miscued, and both men were safe. Pearson drove a two-run homer to left field. The game came down on trying to field, and it went down to the bleachers for two bases, Fitchett and Hume scoring. Walker was only on a fly to left field.

In the fourth inning, a hot guy, Cushman, began the trouble with a gift to first, Fels bunted and Walker handled the ball cleanly but Dabney dropped the throw. Rose bunted and Cushman was caught at third. Philip, Murphy and Pearson were safe. The game was fanned, and two runs were pushed across. Mallory sent a hot liner to

Gave Elia a Score.

At no other stage of the game did Yalo have chance to score. On the other hand, Virginia gave Elia a score in the fourth and fifth, when men were pushed around to fifth, but could not be squeezed across.

In the fifth Virginia had the bases full, but Rose was master of the situation and received great support from the holding of the first baseman almost to the sensational, Cushman, Feis and Jefferson starred. For Virginia, Hoff and Dabney got in some brilliant work. Mallory and Murphy did some brilliant holding. Honaker's did some brilliant fielding. Honaker's was the star of the game, by in left-center, which he handled well, getting a glad hand.
